

19th Annual

Yukon RIVERSIDE ARTS FESTIVAL

Gallery Hop

Thursday, August 15
8-11pm

1. Hannah Campbell

Olfa and Sun
Old Post Office
Olfa and Sun is an autoethnographic project that explores the narratives we consume and carry with us from spontaneous interactions in everyday life. This project works to explore the disjointed experience of stepping in and out of a stranger's life when a personal secret is revealed. Hannah Campbell is a photographer who focuses on themes of shared experience, collective memories and storytelling. Hannah is based in Vancouver/unceded Coast Salish Territories and holds a BFA from Emily Carr University of Art + Design and is currently completing an MFA at Simon Fraser University.

2. Aleks Bartosik

Iridescent Waters
Dawson Daily News
(back room)
Iridescent Waters is an interactive installation that is inspired by the northern lights. Viewers immerse themselves into a whimsical and beautiful world and explore boundaries between the real and the imaginary. The installation challenges one's ability and willingness to imagine, pretend, dream and suspend disbelief. Aleks Bartosik is a Dawson City-based artist working primarily with painting and drawing although often works with performance, installation, and video/ film animation.

Gallery Hop Scavenger Hunt

Join the Gallery Hop Scavenger Hunt for a chance to win KIAC swag and prizes from our sponsors! Pick up a question sheet at the ODD Gallery, hop around town visiting artists in their pop-up galleries, and drop it back to the ODD Gallery when it's fully filled out. The winner will be announced on Saturday.

3. Mo Knight

Dawson Daily News
(front room)
Mo Knight is a professional artist living and working in Dawson City. This hop stop showcases a vast collection of DIY hand pulled silkscreen prints, patches, apparel, mixed media paintings, drawings, and sculptures created over the last two years that Mo has lived in Dawson. Displayed alongside are some aspects of their process work, such as sketches, screens, tools and references used in their art making. Mo's work explores a range of themes such as gender/queer identity, homelessness, sustainability and accessibility, and trying to remain optimistic in a late capitalistic society. Nurture your inner child.

4. Tedd Tucker

Forty Mile Gold
Tedd Tucker is a Whitehorse-based painter. He created his series of illustrations by combining graphite textures with simple, bold shapes.

5. Bennie Allain

A Mediocre Oracle
Billy Bigg's Blacksmith Shop
Bennie will be constructing a large-scale, interactive, found-object sculpture as part of an ongoing series called "A Mediocre Oracle". The sculpture will function as a carnival game-like piece that participants can interact with. In the end, viewers will receive a concise though vague personal fortune.

6. Dan Brown Hozjan

Wall Tent and Canvas
Main festival grounds
This piece was conceived during long days hiking through the wild spaces of the Yukon Territory and dreamt of during nights spent in canvas tents. It is a tribute to the vibrant light and life of the summertime and was painted in a small cabin on Haida Gwaii. Dan Brown first arrived in Dawson eight years ago as a student of the Yukon School of Visual Arts and subsequently fell in love with the community and has been here ever since.

7. Dan Brown Hozjan + Rachael Siminovitch

Exquisite
Bombay Peggy's
Dan Brown Hozjan and Rachael Siminovitch are two of Dawson City's favourite illustrators. For this show, Exquisite, the two will be showing recent work and collaborative pieces exploring the extremely beautiful, delicate, and sometimes unsettling aspects of the Yukon landscape.

8. Basia Hinton

Blackhole Love Song in the Key of Dawson
Front deck of SOVA
Step inside a 3-D grid-map representation of a black hole made entirely from recycled materials! This large sculptural piece explores sound and light waves, intimacy, the cosmos, time, patterns in nature, and desire. The piece playfully invites viewers to pause and experience a moment of self reflection and connect with their environment. Basia has been loving the north and all its magic for the last five years, spending time making art, teaching, drumming, and coordinating youth and arts programs.

9. KVA

Jack London Museum
A collective gallery featuring work done by talented KVA and Gerties Staff. They're not just Blackjack dealers, bartenders, and administrators...

10. Sara Wray Enns

Flushed
SOVA bathrooms
As private and public spaces washrooms are witness to both benign and profound moments, from intense conversations to shopping on instagram. Flushed explores these conversations, thoughts and ideas through audio, text and visual installations in the washrooms of SOVA.

11. SOVA Masterclass

Master Class Projects
SOVA 2D Studio
The SOVA Summer Master Class series ran throughout the summer as crash courses in critical art theory. They were run and developed by three practicing artists with connections to Dawson City: Aubyn O'Grady, Amy Ball, and Justin Apperley, with many local contributors taking part. Works resulting from and inspired by each of the three classes are on display.

12. Parks Canada

Everywhere, A Sign: Advertising as Art in Dawson City
S.S. Keno
Like any trade, signwriters in Dawson were the masters of their craft. These skilled craftspeople trained for years as apprentices just to tell you what a business was or what was sold there. And while it is meant to do a simple thing, advertise, the result of signwriting is a work of art, admired by passing customers, lured by the font or captive image on display. Sign painting in the early 20th century was such a booming industry that the practitioners didn't consider themselves artists, but 'mechanics.' In our display, we will show examples of signage and advertisements from the Parks Canada collection. They are meant to evoke a sense of appreciation for the surviving examples still on display when wandering the boardwalks of Dawson.

13. Rosie Butler

Hot Tin Roof food truck
(beside The Pit)
New mural by Rosie Butler

14. To Talk With Others

Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre
To Talk With Others featuring a special screening of work by Fran Morberg-Green. Also visit the ODD Gallery at KIAC and the gallery at SOVA for other TTWO works.
